

CRC TiME Forum Speaker Biography – Dr Carina Kemp

Dr Carina Kemp is currently an independent advisor on all things data to help an organisation on their digital transformation journey to innovate and get the most out of their data. Dr Kemp recently left AARNet as the Director of eResearch where she led Research Cloud Services enabling researchers with tools and advice for all their data and digital infrastructure needs. Dr Kemp joined AARNet from Geoscience Australia, where she provided scientific and digital leadership. At GA, Dr Kemp also led the development of virtual laboratories and high-performance computing to enable geophysical applications for pre-competitive dataset delivery. In a 20-year career, Dr Kemp has always strived to enable research and innovation working for higher ed, industry, government and NGOS. Her interests include open data, data science, machine learning, high-performance computing, communication of science, improving collaboration across science and information technology disciplines, and encouraging leadership and women in science.